

Aberystwyth University

Aberystwyth University has three attractive landscaped centres. Each of which has a well served bus route. The laboratories, libraries, teaching and social buildings are within walking distance of each other, separated by open spaces with lawns and trees. Residential facilities for students are also located on campus. Our campuses provide an environment which is highly conducive to teaching and research.

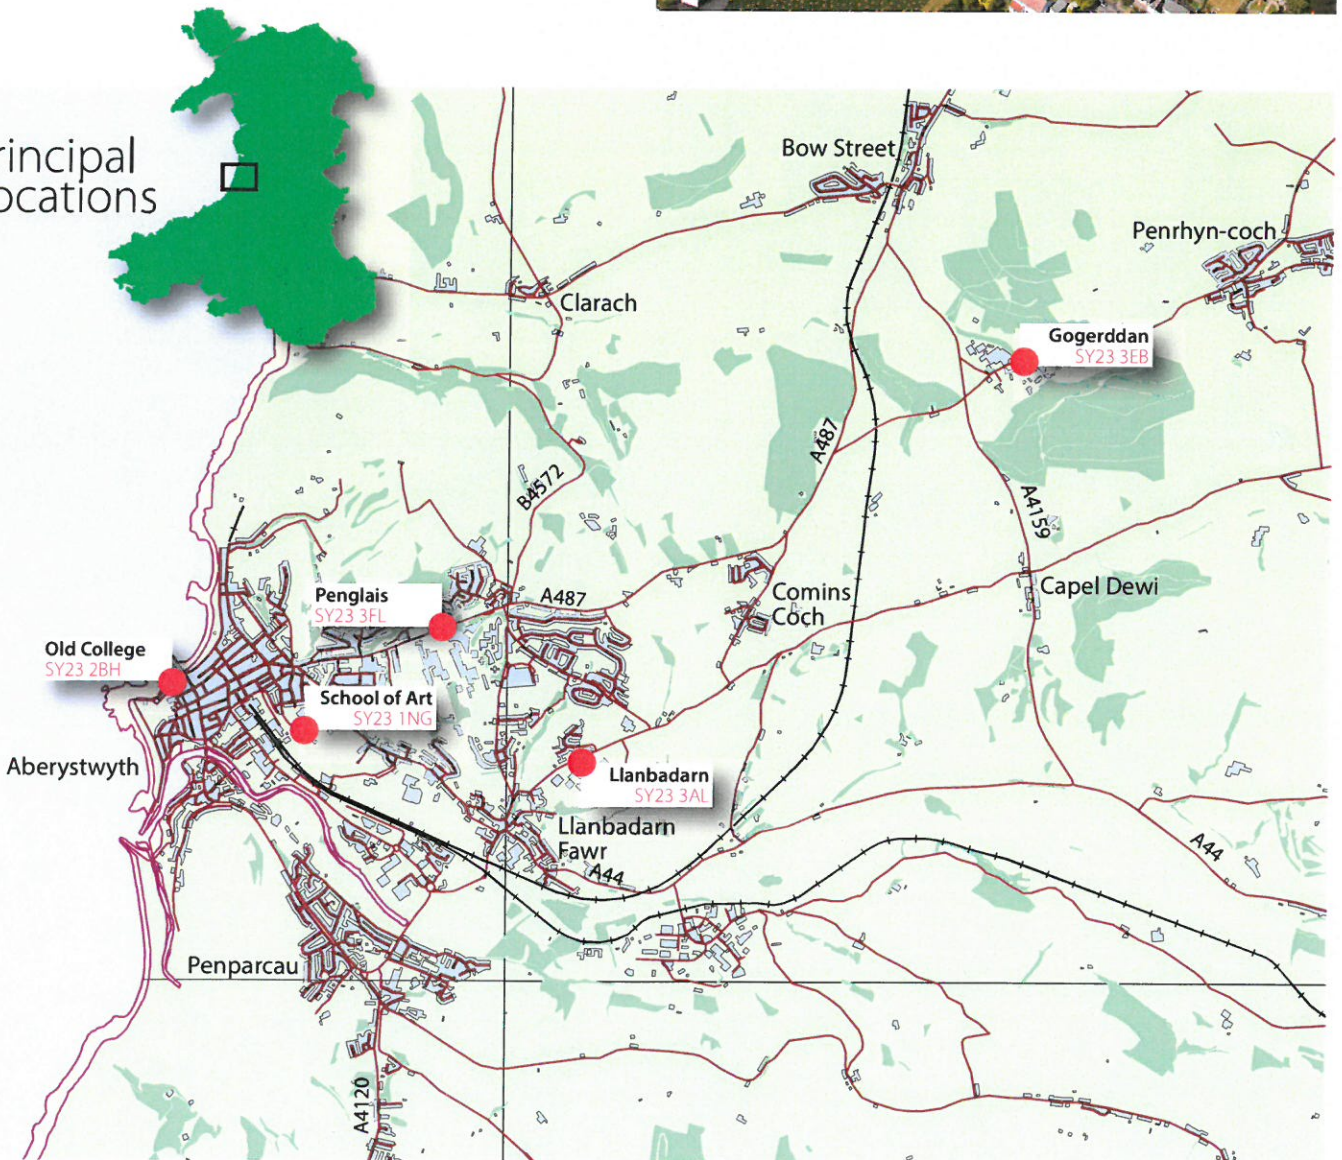

Penglais Campus, which comprises most of the University buildings and also the Arts Centre and Students' Union, has been developed since the 1950s and the buildings feature a variety of architectural forms including the award winning Hugh Owen Library and Physical Sciences buildings. The views from Penglais Campus, which overlooks the town of Aberystwyth and Cardigan Bay, are amongst the most spectacular of any university location in Britain.

The award winning Llanbadarn Centre, which houses the Institute of Management, Law and Information Science is shared with Coleg Ceredigion, overlooks the town and Cardigan Bay to the west, whilst the magnificent backdrop of the Cambrian Mountains lies to the east.

At Gogerddan, on the outskirts of town is located our major centre for research in land based sciences and the main centre for the Institute of Biological, Environmental and Rural Science.
